Giving Enriches

Lesson for December 1, 1963

Readers of the book of Acts will remember the interesting financial experiment that was carried on there in the early days after Pentecost. All possessions were placed in a common fund, and were distributed to all, in proportion to their needs. As an expression of unselfish Christian love, this was admirable. As a permanent way of life, it was bound to fail, because while the plan managed distribution very well, it made no provision for production. So when the pooled gifts were all used up, there was nothing left but starvation — unless someone came to their rescue.

Offering for the Saints

This was where the Corinthian church came in. Paul knew that there were serious differences between East and West in the church of that early day, and also that one cure for this would be for the wealthier churches to help the poorer ones. He called this the "offering for the saints," meaning the Christians in Jerusalem. (He speaks of this offering also in Romans 15:25-31. Now Paul speaks about this in an unusual way. Most people, if asked, "What good is this offering do?" will begin to tell you what good it will do those that are to receive it. Paul on the contrary speaks most enthusiastically about what the offering will do for those who give it. There is nothing here suggesting the spirit of some money raisers: "Well, I know money is an unpleasant subject, and I hate to pass the hat. But this congregation has been given this quota by the Bishop and we've just got to pay our share if it kills us. Besides, remember that every dollar you give means a dollar more in deductions when you pay your income tax. So folks, give till it hurts!"

Give Till It Doesn't Hurt

Paul on the contrary speaks of his many expressions all to the same point: "rejoicing," "cheer," a cheerful giver (the Greek word means hilarious, gay) . . . every blessing in abundance. . . . abundance for every good work . . . multiply your resources . . . enriched in every way . . . service to God . . . the surpassing grace of God in you." (And these are not all.) Now Paul does not promise these people that after they have given to the distressed brothers in Jerusalem, their salaries are going to be raised, or that they will find hidden treasure in a field. He does not promise them any money advantage or benefit whatever. If he did, then giving would not be giving: it would be only another financial investment. Invest in bonds, invest in charity, what's the difference? That is not Paul's view at all. This giving is a way of life, a way of money (which is not spiritual at all, and in fact a great temptation) into spiritual blessings. Giving, he says in effect, will be happier and better people afterwards. (Not that Pul thought of this as one once-in-a-lifetime spasm of generosity, but rather a habit it he hoped they would form.)

Spiritual Blessings

Now the kind of happiness and satisfaction of which Paul speaks is not that which comes by just any one. If, to your mind, nothing is real except what can be eaten, and the only good stuff, then of course such things as happiness and the grace of God are just words. But if you know how real the joy of serving God is, you can experience the joys of generosity.

Now some one may complain that all this is a little hazy. How can you prove to me, before-hand, that God will bless me if I am generous? And how can I prove to any one that God has blessed me? The answer to that objection is two answers, really. One is that you can't demonstrate beforehand that you will be a happier and better person by generosity — by coming to religion from Christ's own outflowing heart — increases through a lifetime. You have to find that out for yourself. And as for laying out spiritual blessings for others to look at, as you might display a collection of coins, we must remember what Jesus said:

"When you give alms, do not let your left hand know what your right hand is doing, so that your alms may be in secret." (Matt. 6:3-4) Pride in giving spoils it all.

We are all sorry of the death of our President, John F. Kennedy. We have prepared a place for him and wanted him to be with him and his angels. When God comes a place for us, he will come and take us with him. We don't know when he will come but we have to be ready for his coming. If we live the way he wants us too we will always be ready for his coming. It was unbelievable to hear the death of President Kennedy, but God takes the rich and the poor. God must have had many choice among us. If we believe in God and live the way he plans for us to live, he will prepare us a place in our Heavenly home. In our Heavenly home there is no sorrow or sinning and a place where we will never grow old. Believe in God and we will have eternal life.

Springfield

"Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord, they rest from their labor."

Our neighborhood was saddened last week to hear the tragic death of our President. Our sympathy goes out to Mrs. Kennedy and the whole Kennedy family. I think I speak the voice of all the Negroes of Appomattox County. We have not only lost a President, but have lost a friend. But we are all submissive to God's will. He knows best.

Don't forget the religious service at the Springfield Baptist Church Thanksgiving evening 7:-30. Free refreshments will be served after the service. Come and hear what the man of God has to say.
